Protect our 4-Legged Children from the Dangers of the Upcoming Holidays

Halloween:

- Keep your pet on a leash so they cannot run out the door!
- Keep all candy up and away from those interested noses
- Have a current identification tag on your pet in case they escape.

Winter and Pets

It is the time of year to prepare for colder weather, and the changes it brings. And, although pets are prepared for winter by nature, some precautions are still necessary

Do not allow dogs to to run free outside. Due to the sound dampening effects of snow, pets often cannot hear cars coming. It is also easier for the pet to become lost and they can easily freeze to death.

Do not let your pets play in the garage. Even though antifreeze is great for our cars it is toxic and deadly for our pets. Many pets have to be put down after ingesting this very sweet tasting chemical.

Allow indoor pets outside long enough for exercise and to "go" only. Always supervise indoor pets when they are out. If cats are known to run free in your neighborhood, remember to tap on your car's hood before starting it because cats will often climb under the hoods of cars onto the engine or surrounding area to get warm.

Remember as the holidays approach, this is the most dangerous time of the year for our pets. The two greatest dangers are lost pets and pet poisoning.

Tell The Guests, and Especially the Children, the Rules for Your Pet – what rooms they are or are not allowed, not to feed the pet scraps (if ten guests feed a 30 lb. dog two scraps, you could have a very sick dog), and other rules of the house. Do not let children harass them.

Do Not Ignore Your Pet – With the hustle and bustle of the holidays, pets become stressed - this is a time for extra attention. Take time every hour to stop and say hello! Do not forget to

Max's Helpful Hint

My seasonal allergies are driving me crazy (and everyone in the house) as all I do is scratch and lick. My Mom even resorts to putting one of those stupid plastic cones on me.. geez. She got really frustrated and took me walk them, let them out, feed them, and change the litter box or other daily routines.

Holiday Foods

Alcoholic beverages, candy, chocolate, turkey and fixings, pork, fish, chicken bones, are a few of the foods that should be avoided. If eaten, bones can splinter when chewed and eventually puncture the intestinal tract.

Bones purchased in grocery (but do not cook them) and pet stores are a safe substitute. Never give your pet chocolate. It is highly toxic to animals — causing stomach cramps, constipation or diarrhea. It's best to keep your pet on its regular diet. It's common to see dogs with both vomiting and/or diarrhea right after Thanksgiving and Christmas. Some can be seriously ill. Another food related hazard is the plastic six-pack beverage holders; kittens especially, can become entangled in them. Remember to cut them up before putting into the garbage. This will also help the wildlife at the landfills too (especially birds).

Holiday Paraphernalia

- Cover up or hide electric cords. Never let your pet chew on them.
- Do not tie ribbons around pet's necks or limbs.

- Watch out for rubber bands too.
- Be cognizant of wrapped gifts; sometimes they contain chocolate, candy or other items that might make pets very sick.

Poisonous Plants

Although dogs and cats have a good sense what they can and cannot ingest, accidents do happen. Many plants, including Christmas rose, holly, mistletoe, philodendron, dieffenbachia are just a few that are toxic to your pet. Always try to keep them out of your pets reach. The smaller the pet, the more risk of toxicity if she ingests a poisonous plant. Some signs of poisoning include vomiting, diarrhea, nervousness, difficulty breathing, and change in pupil size. Your pet may even stumble, go into convulsions, or become unconscious. If your pet ingests something you may want to contact: Animal Poison Control Center - 888.426.4435

Holiday Reservations

Need a reservation? There is a $50 per pet non-refundable deposit for each reservation during peak times. Peak season cancellation policy is in effect for Thanksgiving Weekend and from December 16th through January 9th.

Fleas

Fall and spring are the worst times for fleas so PLEASE treat your dog with a topical preventative prior to reservation. This ensures that your pet will not pick up these pesky bugs when it is being walked or playing in the yard.

to a special vet who suggested that Mom give me honey (it has to be produced within 50 miles of our home). Apparently, because bees gather from the things that I am allergic to, honey has ingredients to neutralize my allergic reaction. My Mom gives me ½ teaspoon a day. If you are bigger, then use one teaspoon. I don't get sick from honey either.
